

WHOLESALE JAIL DELIVERY IS FRUSTRATED HERE

TENSION IN DRY PARLEY INCREASING

Committee is Buffeted by Complaints From Both Sides

Washington, April 21—(AP)—Buffeted by complaints from both sides, the Senate prohibition committee continued its hearings today in an atmosphere of increasing tension.

The drys again had the right of way and as the time allotted them drew toward its close they put on the stand a succession of witnesses who spoke for prohibition organizations, farm groups and others in opposition to any change in the Volstead act.

The managers of the dry side of the controversy formally asked that their time be extended and the committee took the petition under advisement. It was pointed out by the dry leaders that Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, the committee's only wet member, had taken up with cross examination much of the time allotted for dry testimony. Senator Reed himself, on the other hand, has complained that the drys are being favored by the committee's methods of procedure.

Committee Was Late.

The committee was 20 minutes late in getting under way but when the meeting finally started it moved forward rapidly.

At the outset Chairman Harrell announced receipt of a letter from Governor Pinchot of Pennsylvania declaring the dry law can be enforced but attacking present enforcement methods. The chairman turned the letter over to the dry managers who indicated they would present it formally later.

Oliver W. Stewart, head of the Flying Squadron Foundation, made a brief statement in which he declared conditions were improving under prohibition and then the drys put on the stand S. L. Strivings of Castle, N. Y., who said he spoke for the National Grange. He filed a brief recapitulating the attitude of the grange for more than thirty years on moral questions, and opposing any change in the dry laws. Many farms are going in to the hands of foreigners, he said, and the one way to inoculate patriotism in these people is for Americans to obey the law.

Codman Cross Examinations.

In the absence of Senator Reed, cross examination of the dry witness was conducted by Julien Codman, counsel for the wet managers.

Striving adverted to the appeal of organized labor for the return of wines and beer and said the employees were not on the side of those demanding a return of "the drink curse."

"I don't know where the organized labor officials get their figures of 3,000,000 members of their organizations," he added, "we find that in 1925 the enrolled membership had shrunk to 2,865,979."

Another U. S. District Attorney—A. E. Bernsteen of Cleveland was called next by the drys. He said his office handled 814 liquor cases from July 1, 1924 to July 1, 1925.

"From July 1, 1925 to April 1, last, we had 831 cases," he added, "since April 1 there have been 51 cases."

Bernsteen said there were 173 padlock cases from July 1, 1924 to July 1, 1925, with 271 cases since the last date.

"What's the best way to bring about enforcement of the law?" asked Senator Goff, republican of West Virginia.

"Prosecution with jail sentences," Bernsteen replied, "fines mean nothing."

"Have you received much assistance from local police?" asked Goff.

"We did not at one time, but have during the last year."

The witness contended that trial by jury in misdemeanor cases should not be abolished as suggested by District Attorney Buckner of New York.

"Our dockets have not been clogged," he said. "If a community knows you are going to enforce the law, it will react to it."

"Is crime decreasing or increasing in your district with respect to violation of the Volstead act?" Goff asked.

"I think it is decreasing."

"Do you think the Volstead act can be enforced?"

"It can be enforced and is being enforced in northern Ohio."

The Cleveland district attorney said a greater part—"way above 60 percent"—of those arrested and convicted for violating the prohibition laws were foreign born.

"Have you any conclusion as to why the foreign born are more prone to violate the law?"

"We get so many of those cases because of a failure on the part of the state authorities to enforce the law. Politicians may have something to do with it."

NEXT WEEK WILL BE "CLEAN UP WEEK" IN DIXON; CITY AND CITIZENS CO-OPERATE

Everyone is Urged to Join in Movement to Clean City

Dixon will observe the annual "Clean-Up Week" this year as in the past several springs, with a strenuous ten day campaign of rubbish hunting. Commissioner Joe E. Valle presented the proposition to the city council at its regular weekly session last evening and was accorded the unanimous support of that body in the carrying on of such a campaign.

A ten day period, commencing next Monday morning at 6 o'clock, has been arranged for the "Clean-Up" campaign. Lawns will be raked, ashes removed from their all-winter hiding places in many basements, rubbish hauled away, alleys raked and in fact everything that can be done to ward the general spring housecleaning of Dixon on the part of the citizens and the city officials will be undertaken and rushed to a rapid completion. Local civic bodies will also be asked to join in the clean-up campaign.

Commissioner Valle of the street department stated today that any person who is unable to afford having ashes and rubbish hauled from their premises, would not be handicapped in participating in the drive because of this fact. In any such instances, the parties are requested to telephone City Clerk Blake C. Grover and the street department trucks will remove such refuse. Other announcements as to the drive against dirt and rubbish will appear later.

All ashes, rubbish, etc., should be dumped in the ditch on Highland avenue between First and Second streets, and all next week the city will have a man there to direct such dumping.

Clinton Man's Car is Blown Up With Dynamite Charge

An automobile owned by Henry C. Vining of Clinton, Ia., was blown up at an early hour Sunday morning. The car was in his garage and was completely destroyed by a charge of dynamite and gunpowder.

The charge was placed beneath the driver's seat and wires were connected with the starter and the battery, and it is presumed the would be murderers expected that when he stepped on the starter the fuse would be lighted and he would be instantly blown to pieces.

However, they also made a connection with the battery and the fuse caught afire, and they evidently had to run for their lives. Mr. Vining knows of no reason why an attempt should be made on his life.

BUTLER DEFENDS HIS PROSECUTION OF COL. WILLIAMS

Says Propagandists Are Twisting Facts and Evading Issues

New York, April 21—(AP)—Criticism that he violated the code of social ethics in prosecuting Col. Alex S. Williams for intoxication is answered by Brig. General Spedley D. Butler in a dispatch from San Diego, Calif., mand. General Butler says, "Will be to the New York World today."

"Impartial discipline in this command," General Butler says, "will be maintained despite all fluffing by well organized propagandists to the contrary."

"This is issued, not as a defense or explanation, but to present an angle on this case that has not been apparent in all the mass of insipid publications circulated with a view to intimidation."

Unfortunately these murderous assaults have not been confined to me personally, but have been extended in their viciousness to the glorious record of the Marine Corps.

Charges Mud is Thrown

"Mud has been thrown in a futile effort to steer the public mind away from the real issue."

The statement says that naval regulations, issued in accordance with acts of congress passed in 1912, have forbidden drunkenness in the service and that therefore the 18th amendment has nothing to do with the case. The simple facts, the statement continues, are that a member of the United States service committed a violation knowingly and publicly, and in the presence of his commanding officer, realizing that disciplinary action must follow.

"If soldiers, sailors or marines are allowed to break any one law and get away with it, the breakdown of discipline then starts and other violations come easily," the statement proceeds.

Invoke Code of Ethics

"In their frantic but futile efforts to gain their ends, sympathizers with law-breaking have even twisted the facts in order to loudly invoke the code of social ethics, not because it applies in the slightest degree, but because of its strong popular appeal. Will some so-called social arbiter determine the length of time a guest must respect the immunity of his law-breaking host?"

"I wish to acknowledge a debt of gratitude to Rear Admiral A. H. Robertson, who, with full knowledge of the facts, so courageously and publicly stood by me. His example is inspiring."

Conviction of Col. Williams for drunkenness was indicated when the court martial hearing of his case was adjourned in San Diego Monday without notice of acquittal.

Hubby Vanished Eight Hours After Marriage

Mrs. Eugenia Stanfield, colored, of this city, was granted a decree for divorce by Judge William J. Emerson in the circuit court yesterday afternoon from her husband of less than eight hours, Gordon Stanfield, whose present whereabouts are unknown. Mrs. Stanfield testified that she was married April 12, 1923 in this city and that a few hours after the blissful ceremony had been performed her husband left her with the excuse that he was going for his clothes. This was the last of Gordon and despite state warrants and searches made by officers in many cities he did not return to his bride and the decree for divorce was forthcoming.

Wallick Fined and Sent to Jail by Judge Emerson

James Wallick of this city was fined $100 and costs by Judge William J. Emerson in the circuit court yesterday afternoon on a charge of disorderly conduct and in default of this amount, was remanded to the county jail. Wallick was delivered over to Sheriff Risley about three weeks ago when his bondsman desired to be relieved of the responsibility. The case was taken to the circuit court on an appeal from the court of Justice Grover W. Gehant, where Wallick was originally fined $200 and costs on the same charge.

Lee Man Arrested for Contempt Tuesday P. M.

Clyde Wrigley of Lee is in the county jail, where he is being held pending his being cited in the circuit court on a charge of contempt. Several weeks ago in a divorce action, Wrigley was ordered by the court to pay for the keep of his children who were to remain with his divorced wife. The payments ceased, it is charged, and the citation for contempt followed.

GIRL'S STORY IS GIVEN ATTORNEY FOR GRAND JURY

DeKalb Assault Case May Not be Presented Till Friday

DeKalb, Ill., April 21—(AP)—The first detailed story of an alleged attack by three former students of the Northern Illinois State Teachers' College here has been obtained from Miss Dorothy Westervelt, 20 year old co-defendant by State's Attorney Poust for presentation to the grand jury, which convenes today at Sycamore.

Miss Westervelt, who has been seriously ill since she was mistreated in an automobile ride ten days ago, went to her home in Shabbona yesterday, but returned last night to tell her story to the state's attorney at the home of her cousin, Judge H. W. McEwen. It is believed the attorney will present her story to the grand jury and will not require her to appear.

Three other cases will be taken up by the jury before that of Miss Westervelt, State's Attorney Poust said, and probably it will be Thursday afternoon or Friday morning before the evidence is heard.

A cordon of deputy sheriffs and police was thrown around the court house at Sycamore and Sheriff Crawford issued orders for the prompt suppression of any gathering which threatened violence today.

While trouble was not expected, every precaution was taken to protect the three young men accused of the crime and prevent disorder.

"Our people are mollified by the promise of prompt prosecution," the sheriff said, "but there is no doubt that feeling is running high, particularly among former neighbors of the girl at Shabbona."

Two of the accused youth, Emerson Wilson and Stanley Hunt are in jail. The other, Leonard Rich, is at liberty under $5,000 bail.

Forger Sentenced to Pontiac Tuesday From Circuit Court

Pat Murphy, aged 22, professional baseball player, and soldier of fortune since his twelfth birthday, pleaded guilty to a charge of forgery before Judge William J. Emerson in the circuit court yesterday afternoon, and was sentenced to serve an indeterminate sentence in the state reformatory at Pontiac. Murphy stated that he had made his own way in the world since his twelfth birthday and that he came to Dixon on Christmas Eve last, forged checks and then left the city. He went to Davenport where he repeated the operation, but was less successful in making his getaway, and was arrested.

The charge of forgery in the Iowa city was amended to that of operating a confidence game and Murphy was turned over to Lee county officials after serving a brief sentence in Davenport. According to the story Murphy told Judge Emerson he had spent two years in Los Angeles, Calif., where he was a member of the White Sox baseball team of that city.

Nickel Plate Plans for Merger Resumed Today

New York, April 21—(AP)—Plans to rebuild the financial structure of the Nickel Plate railroad merger, disappeared by the Interstate Commerce Commission, more than a month ago, began to take shape today when O. P. and A. M. Swearingen, sponsors of the proposed $1,500,000,000 consolidation held conferences with E. N. Brown, chairman of the Pere Marquette and Greenville Kane, chairman of the Erie Railroad.

The discussions, it is understood, involved the drafting of new and more liberal terms by which these two roads could be united with the Nickel Plate, the C. & O. and Hocking Valley Railroads. Neither the Van Swearingen nor the officials of the other roads would comment on the outcome of their conferences.

"Delish," Known Well in Springfield, Dead

Springfield, Ill., April 21—(AP)—After earning a small fortune, estimated at $30,000 by selling apples and candy from a basket to employees in the state house, newspaper offices, hotels and other public places as "Delish," died here today.

The name "Delish" was attached to Savina through his habit of hawking his wares with the words "Delicious apples." He numbered among his acquaintances hundreds of legislators, businessmen and downtown office workers.

San Francisco, Calif., April 21—(AP)—Telephone advices from Oroville report the recovery this morning of the body of Jack Coyne, 45, of San Francisco, one of the six men who was entombed last Saturday in a slide in the Grizzly Creek tunnel near Quincy, California. The mine is 25 miles from the town.

Horseback Riding Too Dangerous for Chief Air Service

Omaha, Neb., April 21—(AP)—Captain R. G. Erwin, chief of the air service of the Seventh Army Corps Area, declared horseback riding is too dangerous, after a recovery from a recent spill on the bridge path.

"I'm not a glutton for punishment," he said. "I'm no coward, but horseback riding is too dangerous. Me for the air."

Captain Erwin has flown thousands of miles without serious accident, but has been injured severely twice while horseback riding.

PROSECUTORS OF DISTRICT WILL MEET MAY 26th

Conference of States Attorneys Will be Held in Rockford

State's attorneys from thirty northern Illinois counties will meet in Rockford on Wednesday, May 26. They will hold two sessions on that date and the prosecutors will be entertained at the Rockford Country club. The program for these sessions and the entertainment of the county officials is in the hands of State's Atty. William D. Knight, of Winnebago county.

The thirty northern Illinois counties represented at the meeting all lie within the second appellate court district of the state. Last year the Illinois State's Attorneys association held a district meeting at Benton, Ill., in the fourth appellate court district. The district meeting held last year was a success and the association determined to hold another similar meeting in Rockford this year.

Golf on Program

There will be a session of the district attorneys held at 10 o'clock in the morning of May 26. A brief afternoon session will be held at 2 o'clock. Papers will be read and there will be discussions by those attending. At noon luncheon will be served at the county club. At the conclusion of the afternoon session there will be golf on the country club links.

John H. Searing, state's attorney of Jackson county, and president of the Illinois State's Attorneys association, is expected to attend the Rockford meeting. State's Atty. Searing lives in Murphysboro. It is expected a number of prominent state's attorneys of the state will attend the meeting beside those of the Illinois counties which comprise the second appellate court district. Elaborate plans are being made for their entertainment.

Two Autos Stolen From City Streets Tuesday Evening

Two Ford cars, both practically new, were stolen from the streets of Dixon last evening, according to reports made at the police station. A Ford coupe which was purchased by Ford Hayes of this city last Saturday was taken from in front of the south side high school, where the owner was attending a graduation exercise. A new Tudor sedan, owned by B. A. Marriott of the Public Drug & Book Company, was stolen from its parking place, which was almost directly in front of the store.

Rum Treaties are Held Ineffective by Court

New York, April 21—(AP)—The effectiveness of the treaties with Great Britain, Norway and other countries permitting the United States to seize rum runners at any point within an hour's sailing distance of the shore was greatly limited today by a decision in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals, setting forth that the treaty does not make law extending the limits of territorial jurisdiction of the United States.

The appellate court, in an opinion written by Judge Hough and concurred in by Judges Manton and Rogers, dismissed seizure proceedings brought by the government against the Sastind, a Norwegian vessel, and the Diamantina, flying the British flag.

TWO IMPROVEMENT SCHEMES OCCUPIED ATTENTION DIXON CITY COUNCIL LAST NIGHT

TWO MINOR SLIPS LEAD TO CAPTURE OF PAYROLL THIEF

Breakdown of Auto and Big Tip to Driver Bring Downfall

Chicago, April 21—(AP)—Two minor slips—the breakdown of an automobile and the giving of a $4.25 tip to a taxicab driver—have led to the capture of the robber who staged a bold daylight holdup of the mails at Indianapolis Harbor last Wednesday and escaped with $37,000.

With $15,000 in cash in his pockets and accompanied by his pretty 20 year old wife, Daniel J. Hesley, 26, former convict and once a high school football player, was arrested last night by postal inspectors at a loop hotel.

Hesley admitted the robbery and in addition to handing over the $12,000, promised to produce about $25,000 more from safety deposit boxes here today. He said that $500 of the hold-up money had been spent.

Denies Shooting Officer

Hesley denied any connection with the slaying of a deputy sheriff who was shot at Mokena, Ill., supposedly by the man who earlier in the day had staged the mail theft. Officers who have traced Hesley's movements are inclined to believe it was impossible for him to have been on the spot of the shooting.

Of the clues he left, Hesley was arrested as the result of a clever bit of strategy by police and postal inspectors. Last Saturday they expressed the conviction that the robbery had been committed by Santon Calahere, whose bullet riddled body was found in Broadview, a suburb. This was done, it was explained, to convince Hesley that his identity was not known, and to give police and postal authorities time to pick up his trail.

The $37,000 loot was the payroll of the Inland Steel Co., and was taken from a mail truck which had stopped in Indiana Harbor. The robber forced the truck driver to operate the car used in the escape.

While on the road to Joliet, Hesley looted the mail sacks. Near Joliet a motor trouble developed.

Tip Aroused Suspicion

While the car was being repaired the mail truck driver slipped away and telephoned police and the robber disappeared. Some time later Hesley reached a Chicago suburb, got into a taxicab and drove around in search of a secluded spot. When a halt was called the bill was $5.75 and the taxi driver was given a $10 bill taken from one of the payroll sacks. Instructed to keep the change the driver became suspicious and notified police.

From a number of pictures of criminals, the mail truck driver singled out that of Hesley as the man who held him up, but he was not taken in custody until officers had watched his movements and discovered the hiding places of the loot.

John H. Eustace Was Honored by Co-Workers

A recent issue of "Peoples Gas Club News," published by and for the employees of the Peoples Gas, Light & Coke Co., of Chicago, devoted considerable space to a report of a banquet tendered John H. Eustace, a distant relative of T. H. Eustace of this city, at which time he was presented with a handsome silver vase and a diamond ring of special design. The remembrances were made possible through contributions made by employees of the company and were presented by Samuel Insull. The occasion was the completion of forty years of service for the company by the honored guest.

Funeral of Dead Boxer Held in Milwaukee Today

Milwaukee, Wis., April 21—(AP)—Funeral services for Sencio Moldez, Filipino, who died here yesterday morning following a boxing match with Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., were held this morning at St. Joseph's Catholic church. Taylor, unable to attend, due to illness of his daughter, which called him to Chicago, sent a large wreath or flowers as a tribute to his opponent. Pete Sarmiento, a countryman of Sencio's, also a boxer, wept silently during the services. The body will be sent to Van Couver, B. C., for shipment to Manila.

Considine of Harmon, a graduate from Dixon high school last June, who is now attending the University of Illinois, was one of the boys initiated in Phi Eta Sigma, a fraternity whose members are limited to freshmen with high grades at a meeting of the "honor fraternity" April 13.

Slight Modification to be Made in Plan on East First St.

The session of the city council last evening was very brief, the board of local improvements occupying a major portion of the time in hearings on two proposed pavement ordinances. The annual appropriation ordinance was read but was tabled until next Tuesday's meeting. The semi-monthly bills amounting to $2,191.46 were paid. Olaf Rees was appointed by the council to audit the city's accounts.

Local improvement ordinance No. 226, providing for the paving of Artesian Place from East River to Second Street came before the board of local improvements for public hearing. There was little opposition to the proposed improvement, other than a petition which bore a small number of names of property owners, who asked the city to refrain from further activity along this line, contending that the street was in satisfactory condition and was not travelled sufficiently to warrant permanent improvement. The board adhered to the scheme to improve the street this year.

Several property owners residing on East First street, east of Dixon avenue, were present to ask for the modification of the local improvement ordinance which provides for the paving of East First street, 230 feet east of Dixon avenue. The original plan for this improvement at the request of property owners, called for a system of four islands in the 36 foot width of cement paving. There was some objection to this and the ordinance was modified to provide for three of these islands instead of four. It was also decided to have five foot cement sidewalks on both sides of the street. The board adjourned until 4 o'clock this afternoon to permit the modification of the original ordinance at which time the scheme will be adhered to.

Home Economics are Discussed in Several County Meetings

In preparation for a Woman's Home Bureau meetings are being held all over Lee county to test the interest of the women in the movement. A meeting was held Monday evening in the Sugar Grove church. Tuesday afternoon in Harmon, last evening in West Brooklyn, this afternoon in Pawpaw, this evening a meeting will be held in Scarborough, and Thursday afternoon a meeting will be held in Reynolds township and in the evening one in Nachusa. Friday there is to be an all day meeting in Amboy.

Twenty-one counties in Illinois have Home Bureaus which are of great benefit to the women, and these are federated and have seventeen thousand members in the state.

In the Methodist Church in Amboy

Friday the all-day meeting opens at 10 o'clock and will be addressed by Miss Lucille Allen of the State University. A picnic dinner will be served at noon, the gentlemen to attend if they care to. All ladies of the county interested in Home Economics are invited to attend these meetings, any one of them or all of them.

FIFTEEN IN CO. PRISON PLAN BREAK

Were Within Few Minutes and Few Inches of Freedom

A daring attempt at a wholesale delivery of prisoners in the Lee county jail was frustrated last evening about 8:30, when it was learned that a portion of the south wall had been removed and everything was in readiness for a general breakout. Deputies Frazza and Rose were the first to learn of the planned escape of 15 prisoners in the absence of Sheriff Elliott C. Risley, who had gone to Watertown to deliver a patient committed to the state institution by Judge Leech in the county court at a late hour yesterday afternoon.

One of the prisoners sent out word of the cleverly planned escape and later explained the details and named the leaders. All of the prisoners were locked in their cells at once and an examination of the west section of the jail was made by the deputies.

Lining Fried Loose.

On the south end of the cell room it was discovered that a section of the corrugated iron lining of the corridor had been pried away and the steel inner lining had been loosened. A piece of steel pipe support to a wash sink had been knocked off and this was used in prying the two sections of steel apart. The mortar between the bricks was from all appearances easily pried and scraped from between the brick to the ventilating system on the south side of the building.

A ventilating stack from the ground to the top of the building on the south side had been chosen as the objective for the delivery. A small wooden door at the bottom of the stack would have presented an ideal place for the escape. The loose brick, as they had been removed from the wall, had been piled behind radiators in order to prevent discovery. From all appearances the leaders in the plan had worked diligently for several days. It would have required very little further work to have reached the objective, the ventilator.

Had Second Avenue.

The investigation also disclosed what is believed to have been a secondary avenue of delivery should the ventilator have proven insufficient. A hole had been forced in the heavy steel screening and a string was suspended to the ground outside, which led to the belief that outside assistance was depended upon. Sheriff Risley was informed that smuggling of saws into the jail from the outside, to be used in sawing bars on either the east or one of the west windows, should the ventilator fail, was the plan of the leaders.

Deputies armed with sawed off shot guns guarded the jail premises last night in anticipation of the arrival of outside help. It was also reported that one of the prisoners who had refused to aid in the attempted delivery, had been "framed" upon. According to the rumor this prisoner was to have been overpowered and subdued in a quiet manner during the time the prisoners are looked in their cells for night at 9:30 last evening. By this method, it was thought no suspicion would be aroused among the sheriff's force.

Members of the jail committee were to be notified today and a general inspection of the interior conducted by them. This is the second attempt at a general delivery of prisoners confined in Lee county's "tissue paper" jail that has been frustrated by the sheriff and his deputies during the present term of Sheriff Elliott C. Risley.

MY GUEST—
Gallant and gay, in their doublets of grey
All at a flash—like the darts of dimes—
Chattering Arab, African, Indian—
Certain of springtime, my swallows came—

Doublets of grey silk, and surcoats of purple,
And ruffs of russet round each white throat,
Garmented brave they had crossed the waters,
Mariners sailing with never a boat!

Sailing a sea, than the bluest deep blue,
Vaster to traverse than any which rolls
Neath keelson of warship, or bilge of trader,
Betwixt the brinks of the frozen Poles;

Cleaving the clouds with their moon-edged pinions
High over city and vineyard and mart;
April to pilot them—May tripping after—
And each bird's compass his small stout heart.

—Sir Edwin Arnold.

Phidian Art Club Meeting

The Phidian Art club met on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. S. W. Lehman of Bluff Park.

After the business meeting the afternoon's Art Topic was given by Mrs. Florence White, who in her characteristic vivid way described her visit to the Woman's World's Fair which is now being held in Chicago. Mrs. White's report, though brief brought out clearly to her hearers the many adjectives of this great fair which was conceived and carried out entirely by women.

Miss Jean Hitchcock who read the paper of the afternoon, gave a very keen study of Tolstol, the man. Out of the life of this Russian genius, who seems rather many than one, she wove a most interesting tale. Her individual comments on incidents connected with the author's life or upon the biographer's report of them, added much to the enjoyment of all.

Mrs. White's good nature allowed her to be again pressed into service to tell of the last work of Tolstol, "The Resurrection," which last winter had its first presentation in opera form in Chicago. Mary Garden sang the leading role and Mrs. White made all aware of her enjoyment of this new work.

As a final number of the program little Miss Sara Altekruze played two piano selections, "Preludes" by Louise Wright and "Fireflies" by Grant-Schofer. This young artist performed most pleasingly.

After the program the hostess served delicious refreshments, Mrs. C. B. Morrison and Mrs. Hitchcock pouring.

THE WOMAN'S DAY

BY SISTER MARY.

Breakfast—
Shredded fresh pineapple, toasted wheat biscuits with hot milk, omelet, crisp rye toast, milk, coffee.

Luncheon—
Corn loaf with tomato sauce, Boston brown bread, apple and sponge cake, pudding, milk, tea.

Dinner—
Stuffed pork chops, scalloped potatoes, buttered spinach with mushrooms, endive salad, rhubarb bread, pudding, milk, coffee.

A lamb chop or scraped beef patty should be provided for small children in place of the corn loaf. No meat is necessary for their dinner if it is served at noon-time. Scalloped potatoes, spinach, finely minced endive with lemon juice and oil and the pudding supply ample evening meal for small persons.

Corn Loaf.
One can corn, 2 cups mashed sweet potatoes, 1/2 cup cream, 4 tablespoons butter, salt and pepper to hot mash. Add remaining butter and yolks of eggs beaten until thick. Fold in whites of eggs beaten until stiff and dry and turn into a well buttered baking dish. Cover with grated cheese and bake in a moderate oven for thirty minutes or until brown and firm to the touch. Serve with hot tomato sauce.

The loaf can be turned out on a hot platter and cut in slices to serve or "spooned" out of the baking dish. (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

The WOMAN'S DAY

By Allene Sumner

Bit O' News!

The palatial mansions which "even such countries" as Siam or Serbia give their ambassadors, are cited to Congress as reasons why our own representatives abroad should be better housed "to uphold the dignity of the nation." Thus is the "keeping up with Lizzie" game, than which there is no whicker game in all America, played in the seats of the mighty.

It's a Woman! Whenever the populace sights an automobile accident, this cry arises in a mighty breath! "The woman driver" has been synonymous of all that was careless and plain-darn-foolish in motor piloting. But this popular belief is even worse than foolishness according to a national survey just completed. With a mighty breath, state registrars of motor vehicles, insurance companies, police commissioners, declare that "women are much safer drivers than men!" Yaaa-a-h!

Coal miners' strikes, carpenters' strikes, plumbers' and street car conductors' strikes, and now we are about to have husband and wife strikes! A forerunner, possibly, of children and parent strikes! In Russia an entire village of wives congregated in the town hall where they wrote up their terms. "We married women live under harsh conditions," they wrote. "Our men beat us, treat us like cattle. We shall not return until they agree to no longer lift their fists against us." The husbands promptly signed.

Color in Homes.
The "lady" of the older vintage who was raised to believe that no "lady" wore colored underwear, is the same who believes that no decent table is covered with aught but a primly starched white tablecloth. Too bad! I have seen the entire tenor of homes change when mother dared spread orange linen on her lunch table and frost it with a bowl the color of sap-phire.

Clothes.
"The successful business woman" spends something like $525 a year on her clothes, according to a budget tale in a current woman's magazine. And even then the winter coat is but $65! eighteen pairs of stockings a year contrasts with another magazine article quoting factory girls as saying that "a new pair every week are none too many if you keep your legs looking right."

What Women Are Saying.
"Twenty years in the practice of medicine gives a real opportunity to see humanity in the mass. The viceroy of social life is worn very thin when sickness enters the home. When I retired from practice I realized that among all my patients of 20 years there was only one married couple whom I knew to be entirely happy," said by Dr. S. Josephine Baker of the U. S. Department of Labor.

MAPLE SYRUP—
Sister Mary offers three tasty recipes for the sap that made Vermont famous.

There's no taste like the taste of real maple syrup and as in other foods the fresher the syrup the better the taste. Desserts sweetened with maple syrup have a deliciousness that can't be imitated. Cakes and cookies sweetened with maple sugar are most "mummy" and candies made from the pure cooked syrup have a flavor all their own.

This recipe for maple mousse is economical—as recipes go—and makes a dessert that will please the whole family.

Maple Mousse.
One and one-half cups maple syrup, 2 eggs (whites), 2 cups whipping cream, few grains salt.

Beat whites of eggs until stiff. Cook syrup while beating eggs for five minutes and add to whites in a thin stream, beating constantly. Fold in cream whipped until firm and pour in to freezer. Do not stir while freezing. Pack in three parts ice to one part salt and let stand three hours.

The next recipe makes a richer dessert and is really a frozen custard.

Maple Custard—Frozen.
One cup maple syrup, 4 eggs, 1 cup milk, 2 tablespoons flour, 1 cup cream. Add yolks of eggs to syrup and cook over hot water, stirring constantly until mixture boils. Add milk and flour stirred to a smooth paste with a little cold milk. Bring again to the boiling point and remove from the fire.

When cold fold in the cream whipped until stiff. Turn into mold and pack in three parts ice to one part salt. When mixture is partially frozen in the whites of two eggs beaten until stiff. Let stand two hours before serving.

Maple Custard Ice Cream.
One quart milk, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 2 eggs, 1 1/2 cups maple syrup, 3/4 cup seeded raisins.

Put milk into a smooth sauce pan. Stir cornstarch to a smooth paste with a little cold water and stir into milk. Bring to the boiling point stirring constantly. Beat eggs well and stir into milk mixture. Cook a minute, just long enough to set the eggs. Remove from the fire and add one cup of maple syrup. Let cool and pour into mold. Pack in ice and salt and freeze until "mushy." Cook raisins in remaining syrup until raisins are plump. Add to half frozen mixture, mixing thoroughly. Let stand an hour and one-half longer to freeze firm.

The kind of freezer used must of course determine the proportions of ice and salt used in freezing mixtures but the usual proportion is three parts ice to one part salt and the average time for freezing is three hours to freeze without stirring.

IT'S UP TO CONGRESS.

Farmers have had their say about farm relief. The question now is up to congress. The last campaign pledges were made that something would be done for agriculture. Something should be done, or the farmers should be told that there is nothing further that they may expect. The attitude in Washington up to date has not been a satisfying one in the midwest.

The burden of preparing the bill was placed upon the farmers who went to Washington to urge action. When the lawyers and bankers and other business men able to draw a bill were sent to the front, there was an apparent effort to discount their influence by assertions that they were lawyers and bankers and not dirt farmers. In other words, unless the farmer steps from the stable to his desk and draws a bill for farm relief that will stand the test of critical eyes of lawyers, bankers and legislators, he is not entitled to such relief. If two farmers come with two bills, they are told that because they can not agree they are entitled to no relief. If they send lawyers and bankers who are able to draw bills, their representatives are derided as not being farmers.

If the farmers conclude that the congressmen are going to do nothing for them and that they never intended to do anything for them, the conclusion will be based upon such reports as are outlined above which have come west from Washington.

That there are industrious congressmen at work trying to do something for the agriculturist is not to be doubted, but they need a little advertising in the corn belt. The reports that are disturbing to the farmers are the ones that most frequently have found their way into print.

The farmer is slow to wrath, but he has been bearing his burden since 1921, while other classes have been benefitting from legislation. He has been hopeful of returning to his normal standard, but still he is below.

Agriculture stands for protection of American industry as a means of maintaining an American market, but when the farmer concludes that he may as well be broke as the way he is, he has it within his power to pull all of our houses down.

OUR MAGAZINES IN CANADA.

Such a flood of magazines from the United States covers Canada that one Canadian publication predicts that in the next generation simon-pure Canadian periodicals will be as scarce as the dodo. Native publications find it hard to stand up against the weekly and monthly assaults from across the border, and they have not found much that can be done to stop them.

One Canadian magazine has a circulation of 100,000, but none other circulates in excess of 50,000, while it is reported that nine United States publications each send 50,000 into Canada, which is only a sort of overflow field. Nine others are listed among those sending between 25,000 and 50,000 over the line. One publication sends more than 150,000 from the United States, the largest circulation in Canada.

It is said that politically the Canadians are influenced little by our magazines, which they read mainly for entertainment, but the advertising has a telling effect in drawing trade to this nation.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

by Olive Roberts Barton

NO. 15—THE QUEEN BEE PAYS HER RENT

Soon the honeycomb was on wheels and the fairyman and the Twins were rolling it carefully along to the fairyman's house.

The next place that Mister Tingaling and the Twins went to collect rent was at the bee-hive.

So they went tap, tap, tap on the front door of the big round hive.

"May I see the Queen?" asked Mister Tingaling as one of the bees came to let him in.

"Certainly," said the bee, stepping aside to let the three tiny people pass.

"Here, Queen, here are some people to see you," said the bee.

"How do you do," said the Queen Bee. "Are you workers or drones?"

I have no use for drones. They're lazy useless people and we put them out."

"Oh no, your Royal Highness," said Mister Tingaling hastily. "We are workers, I assure you. We work very hard—especially on the thirty-second day of the month. And this is the thirty-second. We are collecting rent."

"Rent?" cried the Queen Bee. "Imagine a queen paying rent! I never heard of such a thing!"

"Neither did we, ma'am," said the fairyman, "but your name is in the rent book, so I suppose you must owe it to us. I'm terribly sorry. I certainly apologize."

"Oh, no! Don't bother," said the Queen Bee. "We shall get around it some way. Let me think! Oh, I have it! Instead of money I shall give you honey. That sounds almost the same. Besides, queens may give presents if they wish. It sounds far better than paying rent."

"That's true, your Highness," said Mister Tingaling. "I think it's a fine idea. What do you think, children? Shall I take honey for the rent?"

"I think it's a very good idea myself," said Nancy.

"And I'm sure my wife would think it a good idea, too," said Mister Tingaling. "Yes, your Royal Highness, I should be very much obliged if you would pay your rent in honey. I mean, if you would make me a present of honey."

So the Queen Bee called her workers and said, "Get one of the honeycomb boxes out of the pantry and give it to my friends."

"Yes, your Majesty," said the bees bumping their heads on the ground and going away to the pantry to get the honey.

"How can we carry it?" said Nick suddenly.

"Oh, that's easy," said Nancy. "We'll have our magic shoes make us big again as soon as we get outside."

But Mister Tingaling looked of fended.

"I don't like great big people," he said. "I like you little like I am. Please don't grow big!"

"Oh, well then! All right," said Nick. "But how can we carry a whole combful of honey to your house, Mister Tingaling?"

"I know," said Nancy. "We'll put it on wheels and roll it along."

"Why certainly!" said the Queen Bee. "Little girl, you'll be queen of something or other yourself some day. See if you're not."

"Thank you," said Nancy. "I'm head of the class, and that's almost as good."

"Every bit," declared the Queen Bee. "Now then, I know where there are four empty spoons. They are right under the window of Mrs. Green way's room in the garden. They were on the window sill and fell out. I saw them there yesterday. They'll do for wheels."

Soon the honeycomb was on wheels and the fairyman and the Twins were rolling it carefully along to the fairyman's house.

Her Own Way.

A STORY OF A GIRL OF TODAY

BEARING THE LION

For anyone who has had to earn her living since she was twelve, Mamie Riley is a singularly innocent creature.

She didn't for one moment think that Jerry Hathaway had used his own money for the bag and its contents.

I was frankly suspicious and I did not intend to accept that beautiful bag until I was sure that the restaurateur had paid for it. It was too good for me anyway. I was sure that it and its fittings had cost at least a hundred and twenty-five dollars.

"If Jerry Hathaway thinks he is going to take this out of his own pocket and give it to me," I said to myself—"and it looks mighty like that is just what he has done—he's got another thing coming. I'm certainly no gold-digger even if he thinks so."

I didn't say a word of this to Mamie, however. I simply let her go to the restaurant and then looked in the telephone book for the address of Mr. Hathaway Senior's office and hid myself thither.

Quite a supercilious young woman met me in the outer office and asked me whom I wished to see.

"Mr. Hathaway," I answered with the most disarming smile I had on tap.

It had no effect, for she inquired coldly:

"What do you want to see him about?"

"The return of some stolen goods," I answered calmly. I thought that would fetch her and it did.

"What is your name," she inquired quickly. "I'll take it to him."

"Mr. Hathaway probably doesn't know my name but I think he will see me if you mention that his son, Mr. Jerry Hathaway Junior is interested in the matter."

The girl looked at me with a great deal of curiosity. She wanted to ask me more questions, I know, but I only smiled at her in a way which gave her to understand that I would only say what I had to say to her employer.

Immediately she went into Mr. Hathaway's office where she was gone quite a while.

She returned saying:

"Mr. Hathaway asks if you will dictate what you have to say to me and I will put it in writing. He will read it at his leisure and let you know if he is interested."

"Well, where are we going, this summer vacation?" The family's all thinking of that. Of course they might visit some country relation—and yet the thought kinda falls flat.

Big sister decides that a summer resort, with dancin' and swimmin' and such, is just the right place for a real spell o' sport, but father's reply is "not much!"

Young brother prefers that they get out the bus, and tour for a couple of weeks, but mother objects, and she starts in to fuss—"I can't stand the rattles and squeaks."

Says she, "I'm sure—I guess that I'd pick the mountains, if I had my wish." And father admits it would be kinda slick—except that there's no place to fish.

The arguing lingers for week after week. They all KNOW the best place to roam. If peace and real quiet's the thing that they seek—they'd best spend vacation at home.

A Record Made a Verdict Rendered

Here is a record to make you pause:

70,599 Dodge Brothers Motor Cars and Graham Brothers Trucks sold in the United States from January 2nd to April 3rd, 1926!

The greatest quarter in the company's history.

37 per cent greater than the same period last year, when 51,318 units were sold.

This record was a foregone conclusion. Since the first of the year demand increased week by week. Each period showed greater sales than the one preceding and greater than the same period of 1925.

During the last week recorded, ending April 3rd, 9104 units were sold, against 6530 for the best week last year—a gain of 39 per cent.

Sales figures are an index to the buyer's preference.

Buyer's preference, these days, springs from clean-cut convictions on quality and comparative worth, penny for penny.

Although the peak of the selling season has not yet been reached, the verdict has already been rendered.

THREE FILIPINO SCRAPPERS HAVE DIED AFTER BOUT

Only One of Four Picked by Churchill is Still Alive

Chicago, April 21.—(AP)—Only one of a quartette of Filipino youngsters selected by Frank Churchill in Manila, and trained to a boxing brilliance that enabled them to contest on an equality with the best of their weight in the world remains alive and able to carry on—Pete Sarmiento, the largest of the group and at that only a featherweight.

Cleaver Sencio, who died yesterday in Milwaukee after a terrific ten round bout with Bud Taylor, challenger for the world's bantamweight title was the third to pass in that manner. Young Sencio was the first. He died after a grueling fight with Bert McCarthy in Melbourne. Previously Eugene Ciriol of France, former world's featherweight champion, but recovered. Then came Pancho Villa who soared to heights just beyond the reach of his three little brothers, winning the world's flyweight championship only to die too of a fight. The unusual record of deaths of the little Filipinos has caused Chicago ring followers to wonder if there was something in the tropical makeup to render them unable to follow the fast pace set by their white foemen.

Are Without Parallel. Certainly the series of deaths is without parallel in boxing history. And each of them followed hard, smashing contests in which, exhausted to the verge of death, none of the Filipinos gave an inch but fought tenaciously to the final bell, or, as in the case of Sencio until a hard smash rendered him completely hors de combat.

Sencio and Sencio were clean living youths, finely muscled and apparently in excellent condition when they entered the widely separated rings for their last fights.

Villa, the champion, had deviated slightly from the rigorous path of perfect condition, but he had youth, science, physique and an amazing energy in his favor when he stepped into his last ring.

He might have survived had he obeyed his doctor's orders. He was warned not to fight because of an infected jaw bone, but persisted and died later of blood poisoning after suffering a terrific beating about the head. Jimmy McLarnin a recent victim of Taylor was Villa's last opponent.

Villa Spent Earnings. Villa, ever a lavish spender, never showed until his last fight the effects of soft life he found so agreeable after his had title fights began to knock down American dollars. He earned thousands, yet the charity of his friends sent him home to his bride. A fine monument to his prowess adorns his final resting place in Manila. It grew from small donations of admirers.

Sencio, likewise survived by a young bride in the Islands, heaved closely to the line of his chosen career and was strictly temperate in his eight months in America. He was saving, and his great desire to outshine the Villa star left him no time for dissipation.

In death, while he had failed to achieve a championship as had Villa, he merited the laudation of sports writers who, while he yet lived, had written that he lost to Taylor only because the Terre Haute Terrier is the best boy of his weight in the world.

YANKEES DROVE

BIG TRAIN TO SHOWER BATH

Bombarded Walter Johnson's Offerings Mightily

Baseball warfare has become more strenuous, for Babe Ruth, artillery chief of the Yanks has fired on Washington.

When the smoke cleared at the capital yesterday, it was found that the Yanks had scored 23 direct hits. Five hits, a homer, two doubles and two singles from the "Big Bertha" alone indicate that the Yanks are out this year to blast their way to a championship. The tally was 18-5. Walter Johnson was knocked out of the box. Ruth was not alone in home run hitting. In Chicago the gray haired Manager of Cleveland, Tris Speaker, left handed a blow to the far spaces in a 9-5 conquest of the White Sox. In the ninth inning a pinch hitting Chicagoan, Grabowski, poled one to the big leaguers recording three futile runs.

An error by Jacobson and the wildness of Van Gilder enabled Detroit to down St. Louis yesterday, 5-4. This gave the Tigers three out of four games for the series.

Red Lucas of Cincinnati granted the world champion Pirates four hits and won 5 to 2. A double by Max Carey after a hit and pass accounted for the Pirates runs.

The Cardinals and Cubs split even on their series when Cooper shut out the Hornsby 7-0.

All other games were frozen out.

A year ago the Garrett boy left home for parts in the far west but returned this winter, after having seen a great deal of the Rocky Mountain region. The Knapp family has the sympathy of the entire community in the sudden disappearance of their son who was a fine young man, both boys being members of the local high school. THE A. B. C.'s OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Subject of Radio Address Tuesday Evening by C. K. Eastman, News Editor Central Division

Chicago, April 21—(AP)—The A. B. C.'s of The Associated Press, for the benefit of the average reader who does not understand what that little caption over a story in his newspaper means, were explained last night over Station WMAQ. The Chicago Daily News, by C. K. Eastman, News Editor of the Central Division of The Associated Press.

"Judging from the strange questions asked me by newspaper readers during the years I have been with The Associated Press the average reader has only the vaguest of notions as to detailed workings of that great news-gathering organization, known all over the world as 'The A. P.' So I'm going to talk a few minutes on 'The A. B. C.' of the A. P.' aiming especially at those of you listeners who know of The Associated Press only as three words or the initials A. P. appearing over news items in your paper—perhaps an item from Timbuctoo about a scientific expedition lost in a sandstorm in the Sahara desert, maybe a story from Pekin, Ill., about an extraordinary church revival, or from Pekin, China, about revolutionists slaying a mission."

"Just what is the process by which the A. P. brings these occurrences to your attention shortly after they take place through a newspaper for which you pay 2 or 3 cents even though the distance the news must travel be half around the globe? First understand that The Associated Press is a cooperative, non-partisan, non-profit-making organization. It represents the banding together of some 1250 of the greatest newspapers in the world for the purpose of collecting speedily the news of events in all corners of the world. Last year the job cost something more than $7,000,000. Backed by the wealth of these newspapers the organization is so systematized that no matter where an important event takes place the news of it will flow into the A. P. as surely as water runs down to the sea. It is of world wide interest the news will promptly be spread before the 60,000,000 readers of Associated Press papers."

Speed is Phenomenal
"And the speed of transmission is phenomenal. When Babe Ruth hits a home run in a World Series game in New York the A. P. within a few seconds has transmitted the news over a network of 46,000 miles of wire covering the entire country. The fans in front of a scoreboard in San Diego, California are throwing their caps in the air almost before the ball has stopped rolling. When H. Rider Haggard, author of 'King Solomon's Mines,' and other thrillers of our boyhood days, died in London some months ago the A. P. had landed that information in newspaper offices in Chicago within ten minutes after the novelist had breathed his last."

"How is this done? First, everyone of the newspapers that compose The Associated Press is obligated to furnish promptly to the organization the news of its territory. This is supplemented by hundreds of newsgatherers directly in the pay of the organization. In every town and hamlet in the land there is a man, or sometimes a woman, watching out for news for the A. P. In most cases in smaller communities the correspondent is an editor or a reporter on the local paper. In hamlets where there is no paper he may be a school teacher, a preacher or a justice of the peace. In any event he is primed to hop to a telephone or the telegraph office whenever important news breaks in his bailiwick. If his news is of sufficient importance the nearest bureau or division offices of the A. P. will within a few minutes have experienced news writers speeding to the scene by train, auto or airplane."

That Peoria Mule

"But consider a minor event—the ordinary little story you see down toward the bottom of the column on the first page of your home-town paper. You read an item from Peoria about Ernest Largent's mule. It says that mule came to Mr. Largent's back porch and, as was his custom when he wanted some sugar, pawed the steps. Now Largent had had his shotgun out to shoot some crows and had left the weapon standing on the porch. When the mule pawed the gun fell down and went off, killing a valuable stallion standing in the lot. How did the account of this unusual little happening get to you to be read at your breakfast table next morning? Not by the tortuous and uncertain channels that gossip takes. It took an inevitable course. Nothing like that ever happened around there before. It was immediately noted about. Somebody hastened to tell a friend on a Peoria newspaper. On that newspaper was an A. P. correspondent who put the story on the wires into the Chicago office, whence it was shortly relayed on other wires stretching from New York to San Francisco."

On stories of real consequence editors directing the development of news in Associated Press offices far from the scene take a hand in bringing out interesting angles. All along the tens of thousands of miles of wires carrying the A. P. news reports are men trained to be human question marks. They baffle with ideas. They cooperate with suggestions or contribute information that rounds out the story into the form in which it reaches you. What one may overlook another will think of, so that only shortage of time can limit the completeness of the story. If you read in your paper a story that seems hastily thrown together, leaving a lot of important questions unanswered, the reason probably is that the event described took place shortly before your paper went to press. Time to fill out these blanks had been lacking. Asking questions and putting accurate answers into readable form is the daily grind of The Associated Press man, just as reading his mail is to the business executive or counting out pork chops is to the butcher."

Travels Many Miles.
"A news story will sometimes travel a thousand miles before it gets the impetus that brings it out in its true proportions. Suppose an old man dies in obscurity in a little Missouri village. His home was formerly in Syracuse, N. Y. A country correspondent sends in five or six lines about it to the St. Louis bureau of The Associated Press. It is relayed to Chicago, and thence down to New York on a chance that the news may be welcome in the man's home state. A little later some old-time news man, pouring over the incoming news in the A. P. office in New York, comes across the death notice. He recognizes that the deceased is none other than a famous race-horse owner of forty years ago, who had completely dropped from public notice. His exploits on the turf had once been the talk of the country. At once machinery is set in motion to bring out these facts. Next morning you read a long and interesting story in your paper. You old fellows who were reading newspapers forty years ago recognize a retelling of the exploits you read of in younger days and recall with pleasure the time you saw the famous horseman at the races down in Kentucky back in the 'Eighties.'" falling around him, who sent out the first facts, and enabled The Associated Press again to beat all other news agencies."

"Into every section of this land stretches an A. P. wire manned at the central bureau by two individuals—an editor who sorts and prepares the news and, on the other side of the table, an operator who sends it over the wire in code at the rate of 30 to 40 words a minute. On the receiving end of the wire is another operator with sounder at his ear. In his head this code is changed into words and written directly on a typewriter, ready to be sent by pneumatic tube or by messenger to your newspaper. The A. P. never sleeps."

Rescue of PN-9
Through arrangements previously made by them with a confidential source a tip on the finding of the sea-plane was immediately sent to them. So quickly was the news flashed through the lightning channels of the A. P. that even the residents of the Island of Kauai, toward which the plane was towed, received their first word of the rescue in the form of A. P. news delivered at Oakland, Calif., from there broadcast over the radio and picked up by the natives on Kauai. They were able to hasten down to the beach in time to see the PN-9 towed in."

"When the airship, Shenandoah, fell into an Ohio cornfield bringing death to 14 of her crew advance preparation by the A. P. enabled that association to tell the world about it hours ahead of any other agency. We take what might be called a pessimistic attitude, and always prepare for the worst. When it became known that the Shenandoah was to cruise over the Middle West we learned her route and schedule. Correspondents in every town, over which she was to sail, were instructed to flash her passing to the nearest A. P. bureau. The Shenandoah passed over Wheeling, W. Va., shortly after two in the morning. The next town of size in her path was Zanesville, O., which she was due to pass at 5:29 a. m. When 5:30 came and the Columbus bureau had received no word of her passing Zanesville the editor in charge telephoned that town and learned that the airship had run into a storm near Caldwell, Ohio. Instantly calls were put in for Caldwell, Cambridge, Ava and every town in the vicinity. The result was the appalling news that the after part of the ship had just crashed into Mr. Gemara's cornfield, killing all the occupants of the central gondola. The Columbus office was able to flash the news to all points of the compass within ten minutes of the actual crash."

"To assure a prompt and graphic account of the details three A. P. men set out from Columbus for the scene in powerful cars. Despite the frightful roads in the vicinity of the isolated spot, they covered the 102 miles in two hours and three minutes. Meanwhile the Columbus bureau chief had taken an airplane and beaten them there. Then followed the graphic story that thrilled the country. "As to how news of other lands is gathered and cabled to this country—that is another story, and I have no time to touch it here."

FARMERS FACING PEASANTRY SAYS CHICAGO TEACHER

Their Problem Greatest Facing Americans, He Declares

Oak Park, Ill., April 20—(AP)—The greatest problem of the United States today is the farmer, Prof. William E. Dodd of the University of Chicago, told the Illinois High School Teachers Association convention here. In a country founded by and for farmers, said Prof. Dodd, an intimate friend of Woodrow Wilson and well-known authority on American history, the farmer is the butt of every economic thrust and strain. Everybody gets his share of privilege, said Prof. Dodd, except the man who made the country.

The American farmer has always prospered in war times, Prof. Dodd said, reviewing the prices of agricultural products at the close of the War of 1812, Civil War, Spanish American War and World War, but in 1920 "the farmer was left to the tender mercies of the world at large while everybody else enjoyed governmental protection." The farmer was deflated, he said, and bankruptcy, failure and misery became the rule.

"The country set up by the farmers of 1776," said Prof. Dodd, "was no longer a farmers' country."

Farmer Refused Aid.
President Coolidge, the New England industrialists, the great business men of the middle west and the Democratic party in spite of its ties with hard pressed cotton farmers, all refuse to grant the farmer "security against the competition of a world hard-pressed from every angle," said Prof. Dodd.

One way out for the farmer, said Prof. Dodd, is to organize, but "the only men who could hold the farmer groups together are the great landlords, the business men of the farm areas." And the effect of this organization, he continued, "would almost surely be to feudalize agriculture, a process already under way in the business world." Such farm organization, he said, would also antagonize our European farm products customers, and lastly, would raise the prices of all of the major items of daily consumption.

"Thus we see that what business may do, farmers may not do. Hence for the goose is not sauce for the gander," he said.

Heroes Are Necessary
"The next way of equalizing the life of the country would be a steady, scientific reduction of all tariff protections—the very thing I happen to know was President Wilson's remedy. But here again heroes would have to be endured. When Mr. Wilson managed to tease congress to reduce tariffs by about half, there was an outcry that would have overwhelmed him and his system, but for the timely declaration of war by the German Kaiser. A steady reduction of tariff protection would lower the cost of living and lowering the cost of the things the farmers must buy would have the same effect as raising the price of their output. If half a score of statesmen were put on the tariff board and left alone, they might in a decade work a vast relief."

Deflating Preferable
"But when the prices of goods began to fall in the stores, the American manufacturers would lower wages. Then workmen would strike and the lower prices for farm products would frighten the farmers. They might not take their own medicine. But the process of deflating business is preferable to inflating farmer prices. A healthier level, a lower cost of living, would be a benefit to the farmers of the country."

"That would be a remedy, a confession, however, of the failure of Republican statesmanship these seventy years; and one wonders whether Spartan-trained Republicans would ever be willing to say that, no matter what history says."

"There is another and more promising route to a fair farmer prosperity. A strong organization of farmers already planned. Farmers would deal directly with city governments and fix prices and conditions of the market. That would quickly abolish most of the middle men. And here again would come the pinch. It would be a painful process but least painful of any the farmer court resort to. The farmer is now the victim of his own concessions. And one may fairly doubt whether there is any lot for him other than peasantry."

If You Want a Packard Six This Spring—Order It Now

Last year thousands who wanted to buy Packard cars could not get them and had to be satisfied with something less desirable or keep their old cars.

More than twice as many Packard Six cars were sold in 1925 as in 1924. Had Packard been able to provide cars for all who wanted them this record would have been even greater.

This year the 25,000 fortunate owners who secured cars last year, are sending their friends to Packard.

And though well prepared now, it is no doubt but a question of weeks before our built-up stocks will vanish.

Those who act at once may have an immediate or early delivery of any model Packard Six.

Those who wait may be disappointed like the thousands of last year.

Quality cannot be built hurriedly, and with Packard, quality comes before quantity.

You may have a Packard Six, a five-passenger Sedan for example, delivered at your door with all necessary accessories and with freight and tax paid for $_____.

If you prefer to buy on the payment plan, you may pay $_____ on delivery and $_____ monthly.

May we examine your present car? If it has a market value we will buy it and apply its price on the down payment on the new car.

If we may have your car now, or soon, we can sell it in the best market of the year which of course will be to your advantage.

Then your car buying problems will be over for years to come.

The proof? The majority of last year's buyers told us that they intended to keep their new Packards more than twice as long as the cars they traded in.

GOVERNOR OF N. J. SEEKS PLAN TO END STRIKE

His Mediation Proposal Awaits Owners' Reply Today

Passaic, N. J., April 21.—(AP)—Negotiations for a settlement of the strike of 10,000 textile workers today awaited the answer of the mill owners to Governor Moore's mediation proposal. Spokesmen for the owners have indicated that discussion with Governor Moore would be welcomed but they have made no formal announcement.

Samuel Untermyer, New York attorney, is still in Washington on behalf of the strikers, seeking a senate inquiry into the strike which is now in its thirteenth week. During the hearing yesterday on the resolution to authorize an inquiry, he charged that the mill owners had refused to arbitrate.

Administration of justice has broken down completely in the strike area, he declared and police in Passaic and Bergen counties have "degenerated into a mob."

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, in a statement issued last night in New York, said "the authorities of New Jersey are violating the fundamental law of the land when they interfere with peaceful assemblage and free speech."

The striking workers are not members of the American Federation of Labor.

What my neighbor says

Is of interest to Dixon folks.

When one has had the misfortune to suffer from backache, headaches, dizziness, urinary disorders and other kidney ills—and has found relief from all this sickness and suffering, that person's advice is of untold value to friends and neighbors. The following case is only one of many thousands, but it is that of a Dixon resident. Who could ask for a better example?

Mrs. Joe Forrester, 512 Highland St., says: "My back ached and morning when I got up I had bearing down pains in the small of it. I felt tired and worn out and when I stood it was hard to straighten because of the sharp, stabbing catches across my kidneys. I had dizzy spells and spoke came before my eyes blinding my sight. My kidneys acted too frequently, also. After using Doan's Pills which I bought at the Rowland's Drug Store I was rid of the trouble."

Why Girls Go Back Home

CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Clifford Dudley, New York's latest pet stage sheik, sued by a chorus girl for breach of promise, goes on a "forced tour" of the sticks and is bored silly until, in the small town of Winesville, he spots a remarkably pretty girl, Marie Downey, in the audience with John, her rural sweetheart. Clifford brazenly makes love to Marie across the footlights. Betwixt acts John forces Marie to leave the theatre and quarrels with her. Next morning, Marie thinks dreamily of the handsome actor.

CHAPTER II—(Continued)

And of how people could possibly go to sleep at all if that street was brightly lit all night as the papers said, "the street of a million electric lights." She knew she couldn't.

Rat-tat-tat! Ah, that was her father, who, much as the gossip said he spoiled his only child, never let her lie in bed later than nine in the morning.

"Oh, yes, pop," called Marie, aggrieved. "It can't be nine o'clock yet."

"It ain't," replied the voice of Mr. Downey, just as aggrieved. "But them New York actors, they gotta catch the nine thirty train out, and they're hollerin' for their breakfast. And the cook's raising a racket that Jane's gotta stay in the kitchen and help her. You get up now, there's a good girl, and wait on 'em."

Jane was the chambermaid and general functionary of the hotel, and very seldom troubled with waiting on table on as many as five people at one time. Marie would be ten this morning. A crowd! A riot! She jumped out of bed. Mr. Downey, hearing the plop of her bare feet, ambled back to his desk, his duty done.

Ten minutes later, Marie, a marvel of speedy dressing, in her slip on gingham house dress, was assaulted by a medley of various famished demands on the threshold of the dining-room. "Ham'n'eggs," "Two three minute eggs, there's a good girl," "Aho, there, buttered toast an' a cup of tea." And the character man was thundering in resigned but sepulchral tones:

Three dead men and a couple of eggs!"

A hand, however, reached out and pressed her hand, as she stood nonplussed amid the clam-oring tables. Well-remembered tones chimed softly:

"Ham and eggs and a cup of black coffee."

Marie, charmed anew, gazed into the eyes of Clifford Dudley. So he did remember!

She flew into the kitchen, grabbed the plate of ham and eggs sacred to the morning repair of Mr. Downey, poured the cup of coffee, and, grabbing a napkin and all the cutlery in sight, rushed back to the idol.

The idol, drumming hungrily on the table cloth, gave her a sweet smile, and disposed himself to fall to.

Another hand tightened on Marie's arm.

"Please, little missie," besought the character actor in his best beggar notes, "would it please you to favor a poor, lone old man with the light of your eyes, an' may I please you, two soft-boiled eggs."

"Two soft-boiled eggs," repeated Marie absently. But her eyes were fixed with anxiety on the idol. He was not falling to! He fumbled on the table cloth, and he sniffed, yea, verily, he sniffed, and cast a stony glance in her direction. She flew back across the aisle.

"Aren't the eggs any good?" she stammered.

Clifford, leaning a hand on his chin, looked at her with a sigh of exhausted patience.

"My dear child, how can I tell when I have no fork with which to eat them?"

An anguished, "Oh," came from her soul. What a fool she was!

She looked about madly, dashed to the character man's table, under his blinking eyes abstracted his fork, and laid it reverently by the side of Clifford's plate. He fell to this time without word or smile.

The character man slapped his thigh, and gave vent to a prolonged roar of laughter. Marie retreated on his wave.

Her cheeks hot and her eyes stinging with tears, she sat down on the one kitchen chair and delivered a passionate ultimatum.

"I won't sit on people who laugh at me."

"I'd slap his face good and hard, or let a cup of coffee go. That'd teach him," advised Jane, who had had her experiences with traveling men.

"Then you go, Jane. I'll help so."

So Jane went.

At this moment a low groan was rising in the dining room. The manager, Williams, had come in. On his usually good-humored face was a scowl, and in his hands was a telegram. Seized troupers, their natural pessimism augmented by hunger, moaned inwardly and outwardly and settled back with resignation in their chairs.

"Now what's up?"

"Only this," grumbled the manager and read the wire.

OWING TO EPIDEMIC BOOKINGS FOR NEXT TWO STANDS ARE CANCELLED HOLD COMPANY IN WINESVILLE FOR FURTHER INSTRUCTIONS.

"For the love of two cents' worth of bananas!" cried Sally, the model, viciously flinging down her napkin.

"Anyhow, dearie, we can get some sleep," yawned the character woman.

There was a general epidemic of curses, frowns, flinging down of napkins. Shrugging their shoulders, the troupe began to leave the room. They were of a mind with the character actress, nine o'clock being an hour before dawn in the theatrical circles. The dining room cleared magically, and Jane, coming forth from the kitchen with a belated breakfast, was flabbergasted to be ordered to "bring it up to the room, darling."

"Them actors," she announced in the kitchen, "are a funny bunch. They all went up to sleep again, what do you know, at nine o'clock in the morning! And what's Mr. Downey say, I'd like to know, when I can't clean the rooms?"

Marie, flushed with ministrations to the cook, made a face denoting scorn and annoyance.

"After all the fuss over breakfast! I hope pop charges 'em double. The big saps!"

She drank a cup of coffee hurriedly over the kitchen sink.

"Here, Marie, that's not all you're eatin' for breakfast?" called the cook.

But Marie had fled. The loud he-haws of that character actor had made her too cross for meals. She was beset by a sudden longing for John, who thought these actors were fools, and who was right. She was stifled by impatience, to be him, to cry on his shoulder, to be him, to cry on his shoulder, to be him, to cry on his shoulder.

Perhaps now, if she walked down Main Street and lingered near the big window of the Ross Department Store, John would see her and guess and perhaps come to the door. If she gave him one beseeching look, and walked on slowly ahead, he would follow—and then—these happy actors! She flung herself up the stairs to change her dress.

When she next came downstairs, she was a picture of a pretty, graceful child in her best blue silk jumper dress. She stood framed in the doorway of the hotel, where the old trees cast piquant, dappled shadows on her face, and the sun touched her uncovered hair with a golden hand. Clifford Dudley, sunning himself yawningly against the side of the hotel, looked at her with his ever-ready admiration for a pretty face. This small town girl was better than none, as Clifford says it. He straightened up, and lifting his hat with the affected sweep which he used for obviously easy conquests, put himself at her side.

"Oh," fluttered Marie, not quite displeased.

"Do you know that I'm stranded in this town for days?" said Clifford softly.

Marie bridled: "It's not such a bad place to be stranded in."

"How can you think I meant that?" exclaimed Clifford in his most unctuous manner. "What, complain of being stranded in a town where you are?" He lifted his eyes to heaven.

The pleased smile showed in Marie's cheek. She blushed a little. Coyness was the only weapon of coquetry she had yet learned. She was coy.

"Oh, Mr. Dudley."

"If you were not the most adorable girl I have ever met, I would ask you to let me walk down the street by your side," breathed Mr. Dudley, "but you are so lovely that you make me shy."

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When today's chapter opens, AUDREY MORTON has just slapped JOHN PARRISH in the mouth.

She is in love with HARRY MORTON, her handsome, middle-aged, wealthy guardian. Parrish is Morton's secretary. Parrish disapproves of Morton's association with gay young women, and has just advised Audrey to live elsewhere than with her guardian.

Morton himself, in an effort to avert Audrey's love for him, has thrown Parrish in her way, and himself has let her see him with NONA, a New York stage girl who loves him, and with other girls.

For 15 years Morton has been a mystery in Rochester where he has spent much of his time in a handsome home. He also maintains a costly apartment in New York.

They all are in New York when today's chapter starts.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY (The names and situations in this story are fictitious.)

CHAPTER XXI

PARRISH was young and big and strong, but the blow staggered him.

He stepped back a pace or two, covered his mouth with both hands, and stared at Audrey again.

"Don't you do that again!" he said. His voice quivered in his fingers.

"You unspeakable cad!" she cried. Her slim body was taut, as if she were about to spring on him. He retreated another step. Slow anger was taking the place of astonishment in his eyes.

"If you do that again, I'll shake you!" he told her.

"Just you try it! Just you try it!" she shrieked.

A sound from the rear caused her to turn. For the first time she saw that a knot of spectators was rapidly gathering. Delighted applause was in their eyes, and words of encouragement arose.

She looked back at Parrish, swept the interested crowd with scornful eyes, and turning her back, almost ran to her own apartment building.

Parrish stood watching her, until she was out of sight. Then, with several of the more enterprising members of the volunteer group following him, he plodded away on foot toward Morton's office.

Audrey stormed into her drawing room, a small whirlwind of wrath, and tried to reach Morton by telephone. She was told by the clerk in his office that he had not yet come in.

"Too soon," she said to herself, as she hung up the receiver.

She ran up the stairs, and woman fashion she released her nerve tension by unpacking and repacking her wardrobe drawers, refusing the assistance of her maid. This done, she changed her dress, and carefully reapplied the rouge and mascara that had been disturbed by little trickles of angry tears.

Her eye fell upon the painting that she and Morton had bought in their stroll around town. It had been unboxed and stood in its frame on the floor against the wall of her dressing room. She went over and examined it. It was a portrait of a plump-cheeked girl in the headress and garb of two centuries ago. The background and garments were in the gloomy coloring of the older masters, but as Audrey looked more closely, she saw that the paint was not cracked with age.

"He was right—he ALWAYS knows," she said aloud.

She tilted the picture until she could see the back of it. Heavy yellowed paper was pasted on the frame covering the rear of the canvas. She inspected the frame itself with dissatisfaction. Ripping off the paper, she bent the little nails that held the canvas in its frame, and pulled the picture from the old gilt molding. She held it up level with her eyes.

Then she gave a sharp exclamation. She was looking at a line of small lettering, in the lower right-hand corner of the painting. The letters were in red pigment.

"H. Morton, January, 1901," they read.

She looked again, to make sure. Then, with a choked ejaculation, she ran to her closet, hurriedly donned her coat and hat, and with the picture under her arm, ran down the stairs, into the hall, and without waiting for the elevator hurried by the stairway to the street, five floors below. Dancing with impatience, she waited on the curb until a taxicab appeared. Into this she climbed with her picture, and ordered the driver to go as rapidly as possible to Morton's office.

When the taxi pulled up at the building, she leaped out, threw a five-dollar bill to the driver, and without waiting for her change, ran inside. Upstairs she brushed aside a clerk who was standing at Morton's door, and rushed into his private office.

She looked up with a smile. Then, noting what she held under her arm, he tilted back in his chair, and his eyes half closed.

Shaking with excitement, the girl stood the picture on edge upon his table.

Morton nodded. "You have been investigating already," he said, quietly. "So you liked my picture?"

"Did you paint it?" she cried. Morton reached over, took the painting, and regarded it thoughtfully. His voice was a little heavy as he answered. "A quarter of a century ago!"

He laid the picture down and turned to stare out the window. Audrey was on her knees beside him, her hands clasping his arm.

"Oh, daddy, I never knew you painted! Where did you paint it? Why didn't you ever tell me you were a painter? Why did you stop painting?"

He patted her head, absently. After a long pause, he said: "I never intended to tell you. But it was an odd little trick of fate, wasn't it, that that picture the last time nineteen years ago, that must have been about the time you adopted me? Did I see it when I was a baby?"

He arose hastily, and went to the window. His face was close to the glass, so she could not see his expression. She saw his body give a little convulsive shake. When at last he turned around, his face was composed.

"Yes, sweetheart, you saw that when you were a baby—though I doubt if you knew what it was—" "But why didn't you tell me all about it—why didn't you tell me you were an artist?"

He shook his head, and going to her, where she still sat upon her shoulders, he placed his hands on her shoulders. "Child," he said, gently, "it was for the same reason that I have not told you many other things—who your mother and father were; what your name was before I adopted you; who I was and where I came from. I have always wanted to keep about the door of the past. Help me to do it, won't you, little one? It is full of pain for me!"

(To Be Continued.) (Copyright, 1926, NEA Service, Inc.)

Audrey sank farther to the floor, with her head bowed.

"Aren't you ever going to tell me who I am?" she asked.

Morton considered. "Some day, maybe—though you will be happier, and so will I, if I never DO tell. But not now, dear."

She looked up at him. His face was sad, and drawn. There was a weary look in his eyes, that she never had seen before. Leaping to her feet, with quick comprehension, she clasped her hands as a child does.

Take Care of Your Car—Use POLARINE

One of the reasons why you keep your car in a garage is to protect the body from the elements. The engine of an automobile is far more important than the body. Yet the engine is often exposed, without protection, to ruinous grinding friction.

The man who allows this to happen, often fails to realize that the oil he uses cannot protect his engine adequately. He does not appreciate that he is to blame for the big repair bills that naturally follow.

The fast moving metal surfaces of the engine must have the protection of a thin film of oil. This film of oil is to the engine what a garage is to the body of a car.

An inferior oil or an oil not adapted to the engine cannot maintain this protective film. It breaks under the strain of heat and friction. When the oil film breaks, the fast moving surfaces are no longer protected. Metal chafes against metal and the vital parts of the engine are ruined. A poor oil is like a garage without a roof.

Polarine—made in seven grades—one of which, adapted to your individual needs—will provide the proper protection for your engine. Polarine is one of the major products of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana)—perfected after years of scientific research. It maintains its protective film of oil under any and all conditions.

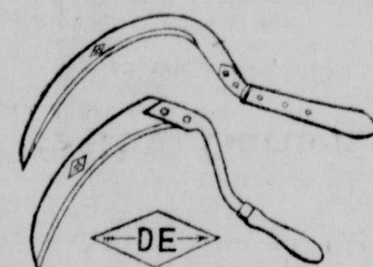

That is the reason Polarine is the perfect motor oil. When you lubricate your car with it you are giving the engine the protection it deserves.

Consult chart at any Standard Oil Service Station, or Authorized Garage. Drain your crankcase, thoroughly cleanse your motor with Polarine Flushing Oil, and refill with the correct grade of Polarine. That's constructive economy.
